MOROCCO'S TROUBLE.

Events in Morocco are moving much more wiftly than was anticipated. For, even before the small French expeditionary force, now on its way from Oran to Casa Blanca, has had time to pass from the Mediterranean into the Atlantic, the French warships already on the spot have bombarded the Moorish port. The combardment was not an affair of blank cartridge. It was carried through in serious earnest, and the Moors are said to have lost heavily in killed and wounded. The a contingency that any Power could face with engagement, if such a term can be applied to equanimity. it, was precipitated by the Moors themselves, and, according to one version, was due to the treachery which is engrained in their national character. The French Consulate had asked the commander of the Galilée for a guard of marines, and it was arranged with the Bashaw of Casa Blanca that the guard should be landed But the marines had no sooner set foot on shore than they were fired upon by the Bashaw's own Moorish troops and by the tribesmen who had come into the town to make common cause with them. An officer and six sailors were wounded, but the rest drove the Moors before them at the point of the bayonet and made their way to the Consulate. Then the bombard ment began, and the two French cruisers, "Du Chayla" and "Galilée," poured shells into the town batteries till they were reduced to ruins, and destroyed the surrounding quarter belonging to the hostile tribesmen. The Moors, of course, were quite unable to make any effective reply, and their commander speedily requested a cessation of the bombardment and the pardor of the French admiral, who peremptorily told him to surrender to the French Consul. Only sheer perversity, says the "Daily Telegraph" can suggest any sympathy for the ruffianly Moors who have brought this well-deserved punishment upon their own heads, and the twelve Europeans who were butchered and p to-data. Open all the year round and officials and Army of Occupation barbarously mutilated the other day have thus, J. VOCLES, Props. Manager. in a sense, been promptly avenged. But the watching the fulfilment of the task.

bombardment does not close the chapter.

Rather, it begins a new one, of which the sequel is beyond all guessing. Only God knoweth" is a favourite Moorish proverb, and it is peculiarly applicable to the present case. But Monday's events have cleared the way for the arrival of General Drude and his little army of three thousand and have given the Moors a foretaste of what they may ex pect if they indulge in further acts of hostility. It is important to note that the Spanish gunboat landed a party of forty marines for the protection of the Spanish Consulate, while a force of five hundred Spanish troops is under orders to-operate with General Drude. No one can over-estimate the value at this juncture of a thoroughly good understanding between the French and Spanish Governments, who were designated by the Convention of Algeeiras to act as the mandatories of Burope, insomuch as they were authorised to organise a police force matic world it is essential that this co-opera on ignoring the outery raised against its Cairo Offices: — Telegraph Building tion, which has throughout disliked the role assigned to and accepted by Spain.

Unquestionably, the situation is serious though the steps taken by France are irreproachable, and her intentions have been announced to and have received the approval of all the Great Powers. Such is the perfect Palace (Palais de l'Ancienne Bourse) 6 confidence reposed in the Government of the Republic by Great Britain that is now declared that no British warship will be sent to Case Blanca, inasmuch as the measures to be taken by the French are considered entirely adequate for the protection of British interests. We hope that other Powers will show a like con fidence, if only to help to convince the Moors that they cannot expect te derive any advant age from international jealousies. Unfor tunately, the Sultan of Morocco, with whom France and Spain will have to deal, exercise but a very shadowy and slender authority over his own officials, such as the Bashaw of Case Blanca, and still less over the Kabyle tribes men, who are practically responsible for the recent outrages. The Maghzen have hastened to express to the French Minister at Fez their "profound regret" for the outbreak, just as they regretted the murder of Dr. Mauchamps near the Algerian border at Marrakesh. But regrets are useless when they are not backed by anyproof of their sincerity. No one believes in the desire of the Maghzen to put a stop to fanatical murders, and if they had the desire it is more than doubtful if they have the power. Not only is there is serious lack of sufficient rolling stock to meet the demands of the agriculturists at this time of year, but it won by the juniors, chiefly owing to the slack that there is not enough accommodation available for the ordinary passenger traffic. The native traveller, unacquainted with the 'breadand-butter" trains on the London Metropolitan Railway system, and happily ignorant of the inconveniences of a special Boat-race train, feels seriously aggrieved if, after obtaining his ticket, he cannot pick and choose his seat, 27 and judging by the observations of one respected newspaper, he wakes justifiably wrathful at being placed on a hot summer's day in the third class waggons, exposed, as we read, by considerate railway officials to the "cooling effects" of a burning sun and the 'malodorious smoke of the roaring engine."
